55 – 70%

of women who have experienced violence, or are experiencing violence, are currently in the workforce – around one in six female workers.

In Australia, almost 50% of women who disclosed that they had experienced domestic and family violence reported that it affected their capacity to get to work.

1 in 5

19% reported that the domestic violence followed them into the workplace with, for example, abusive calls or emails or their partner physically coming to work.

Carrie's Place Corporate Domestic, Family & Sexual Violence Awareness Training educates participants on the critical issues of domestic and family violence within the workplace and our community.

Every business can make a difference.

Carrie's PLACE

Safe and Equal - Australian Domestic and Family Violence Clearinghouse (UNSW.

Corporate Domestic, Family and Sexual Violence Prevention & Education Training

This impactful program educates participants on gender stereotypes, violence prevention, and effective responses, fostering a safer, more informed work environment.

Provided real-world case studies, resources and self-care strategies, participants leave equipped to better support individuals affected by violence.

Additionally, proceeds from this training help fund essential programs at Carrie's Place, ensuring the continuation of vital services for those in need, while promoting early intervention, recovery and long-term community well-being.

Duration: 3.5-hour sessions
Participants: 10-15 participants per session
Price options: Single session or 2 sessions per day.

Inclusions: Two qualified and experienced Facilitators with a considered focus on the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Community, all pre-course preparation, travel time, participant handbook and a certificate of completion.

- Discuss gender stereotypes and how they contribute to domestic and family violence.
- Analyse community attitudes and myths towards domestic and family violence and understand where they come from.
- Outline the various types of domestic and family violence.
- Compare helpful and unhelpful responses to domestic and family violence and identify how the unhelpful responses could be improved.
- Participate in case studies based on real client experiences.
- Obtain multiple resources to support their work moving forward including where to refer a colleague, team member or client who makes a disclosure.
- Engage in three self-care strategies and learn about several others.

Carrie's PLACE

For more information scan the QR code or go to our website:
carriesplace.org.au/corporate-training

02 4934 2585
groupprograms@carriesplace.org.au